Aqueous aluminum-ion batteries (AAIBs) are considered a strong candidate for the new generation of energy storage devices. The lack of suitable cathode materials has been a bottleneck factor hindering the future development of AAIBs. In this work, we design and construct a highly effective cathode with dual morphologies. Two-dimensional (2D) layered MXene ...

It makes the aluminum metal react with air and offers one of the highest energy density of all battery technologies currently available. It can be eight times lighter & four times smaller than Lithium-Ion. Aluminum-Air batteries are not to be confused with Aluminum-Ion batteries, which are similar to Lithium-ion, just using a different metal.
