In reality, there's a difference between a possibility and a solution. What Musk is providing is a possibility. We could cover 10,000 square miles of desert in solar panels, but an entirely centralized national power supply leaves the country vulnerable to continental outages in the event of a storm or cyber attack. While catastrophic storms ...

Why Your Utility Meter Should Also be a Net Meter or Smart Meter. Most solar systems are not independent of the utility grid. These systems are called grid-tied systems, and combine the cost-saving, energy-independence elements of off-grid solar power with the easily accessed electricity from the power grid.. You can offset 100% of your usage with a grid-tied solar system.

Set this equal to the required power of 2000,000 Watts. $A \times 1000 \times 0.2 = 2000,000$ => $A = 10,000$ meter squared. So the area you have 3000 square meter is not sufficient to produce 2000 kW of power. One square meter can produce about 200 Watts and the cost of the solar system is about \$1 to \$2 per Watt depending upon how much backup you want.

Every electric system experiences losses. Solar panels are no exception. Being able to capture 100% of generated solar panel output would be perfect. However, realistically, every solar panel system will incur 20% losses if you're lucky (have a superbly efficient system). Some older and more complex systems can have up to 30% losses.
